Philadelphia Insurance Companies Raises $25,000 for Oil Spill Victims

Bala Cynwyd, PA, August 30, 2010 - Philadelphia Insurance Companies (PHLY) has raised $25,675 for Catholic Charities Archdiocese of New Orleans (CCANO) to help victims of the BP Oil Spill. Money raised through the "Climbing for Cleanup" campaign will help provide food, baby supplies, counseling and other items to the people affected by this disaster.

Philadelphia Insurance Companies has accepted donations over the last month to support the relief work of CCANO. Co-Presidents Chris Maguire and Sean Sweeney, along with Assistant Vice President Doug Killeen, climbed 14,000 feet in the Leadville Trail 100 Mountain Bike Race on August 14th as part of TEAMPHLY's "Climbing for Cleanup." The trio biked for over 10 hours through the mountains and valleys of the Rocky Mountains in one of the hardest and highest mountain bike races in the world.

"The BP oil spill is one of the world's worst environmental disasters and our neighbors in the Gulf region still need our help. Leadville was the most challenging race I've ever done, and the 'Climbing for Cleanup' cause is what inspired me to push on to the finish line," said Co-President and CMO Sean Sweeney.
